

Sefas offers free-to-use digital platforms to support SME's during the CV19 crisis.

Sefas Innovation, a Bristol-based technology company that helps organisations communicate better with their customers, is supporting SME businesses across the UK by offering them a facility for their staff to sign off sick leave for employees remotely via a platform.

Sefas is part of Docaposte – the commercial arm of the French postal service and will work with their colleagues in France, particularly their sister company Maileva, to provide a free digital portal for the duration of the COVID-19 outbreak (up until June 30th, 2020) to facilitate communication between employees and their employers.

This “e-Citizen” portal is intended to raise awareness and inform employees about the development of COVID-19 as well as to ensure that the necessary measures needed are communicated with all employees in the organisation.

The portal is fully configurable by the user SME, “it will be supplemented as and when government announcements are made” promises Docaposte.

Maileva offers 3-month subscriptions to their digital tools intended for businesses and local authorities including:

- e-Signature solutions
- e-Invoicing
- email distribution

The offer from Maileva is exclusive to SME's with an employee size of 250 or less, for any subscription purchased before May 31st, 2020.

To find out more information about e-signature solutions and how you can benefit from this offer, please contact Sefas at marketinguk@sefas.com.
